ETEA FOUNDATION FOR DEVELOPMENT AND COOPERATION

Experience in the coffee sector

ETEA was established in 1963 with the aim of strengthening the management of agricultural enterprises in Andalucia.

In 1988, EATA began an intensive programme of university cooperation in Central America, which has been extended to other regions and countries.

- More than 50 Latin American professors have studied for PhD and post-graduate courses in EATA
- More than 40 EATA professors and researchers visit Latin American or Asian countries each year.
- More than 500 missions since 1990
In order to ensure the sustainability and growth of this experience, the ETEA Foundation for Development and Cooperation was established in 2002.

The EATA Foundation for Development and Cooperation is a university institution dedicated to research, training and action in the framework of cooperation and development.

The development and cooperation aims of the EATA Foundation are as follows:

- Analysis and action on the critical factors involved in development in the local and global context
- Helping to strengthen the aid system for development and to improve the quality of cooperation
- Helping to develop human capital and strengthen university education in the South
- Making cooperation and development in universities in the North a priority in teaching and research

Increasingly specialized work...

- Rural and local development
- Regional integration
- Promoting development of micro and small enterprises
- Cooperation policies and development planning
... in a growing number of countries
